

I took this picture a couple years ago. Angkor Wat is a monumental temple complex located in Siem Reap, Cambodia, renowned as the largest religious monument globally. Originally constructed in the early 12th century by King Suryavarman II, it was dedicated to the Hindu god Vishnu. Over time, it transitioned into a Buddhist temple, reflecting the region's evolving religious landscape.

This is my dog. The Korean Jindo is a breed of dog that originates from Jindo Island in South Korea, known for its intelligence, loyalty, and strong hunting instincts. This breed is considered a national treasure in South Korea, often associated with the island's history and cultural traditions.

Part of my family, in Korean tradition, there is a special ceremony called "Doljanchi", which is celebrated when a child turns one year old. One of the most memorable and symbolic parts of this celebration is the "Doljabi".

During Doljabi, the child is placed in front of several objects, and it is believed that whichever object the child picks first will predict their future.

This is my car. The Veloster N stands out for being a performance-focused hatchback that delivers an exciting driving experience without breaking the bank. It competes with other sporty models like the Volkswagen Golf GTI, Honda Civic Type R, and Ford Fiesta ST, offering a good balance of price, performance, and practicality.
