To Whom it may concern,

I'm writing to give my strongest recommendation for Christopher Barker for any upcoming opportunities. As one of his supervisors for the Information and Technology Services Student Technician role here at Pacific Lutheran University, I've seen firsthand just how dedicated, proactive, and truly great he is at working with a team and individually.

From day one, Chris was an exemplary student worker. He was incredibly proactive and was consistently completing tasks and anticipating what we needed to be done next. Chris' proactivity, plus his willingness to ask smart questions when he needed to, meant he picked up new skills needed for the job superfast and was always a big help on important projects as well as regular tasks in the PC Shop.

Beyond his technical skills, Chris is an excellent communicator. He is always clear, concise, and professional, whether they're talking to other students in the PC Shop, faculty, or staff. This, along with his natural ability to work well with others and independently, made him a vital asset to have on the team, even though he has only been with us for less than a year. Chris was always ready to help where he was needed, and genuinely made our work environment more positive and efficient. I truly believe, the PC Shop's morale and productivity really benefited from having him around.

Chris is someone who takes full ownership of his work, thrives when he has freedom to work independently, and is always looking for ways to learn and grow. His fantastic work ethic, combined with his tech smarts and people skills, makes him an incredible candidate for any challenging and dynamic role you have for him. I'm completely confident he'll bring the same level of excellence and dedication to any position he undertakes.
